In partnership with Audio Gold, London, Barnaby researched and developed a 1970's style sideboard for vinyl storage and record playing equipment. Taking inspiration from the iconic Celestion 66 speakers, Barnaby designed the sideboard using inspired shapes and colours while working with modern materials.

After researching into sustainable alternatives to the 70's favourite rose wood, he was able to use surplus wenge from a local furniture maker and FSC sourced smoked eucalyptus veneer. Velchromat, a high-density component made with specialist natural resin and dyes is used for the core.

The beautiful sideboard is made to order and can be built in a variety of other sustainably sourced FSC veneers to the customer's specification.

Two of the three large drawers hold capacity for seven-inch vinyl.

Abyss

Vinyl storage. oak, Velchromat and wenge.

Top: Sliding doors with rebated handles.
Middle: Black stained oak framing the edge, creating strength.
Bottom: Vinyl storage and sliding door.

Sleek drawer pulls built into the drawer front. Soft close runners ensure the drawers can't slam.

The Abyss has been beautifully crafted with the music enthusiast in mind. The top can host an amp, two turntables and a mixer. The space below provides ample storage for favourite records including two drawers designed to take seven-inch vinyl, and a third drawer for storage. The elegant sliding doors allow the vinyl to be easily accessible during a mix or listening session. The large recessed back creates the option for extension leads and cables to be mounted out of sight. Carefully crafted, stained oak legs frame the sideboard, grounding the piece effortlessly.

Made to order with a range of veneer options available.

Solid English oak legs and underframe create a strong base. Stained black to help the Abyss float in your home space.

Although built in the 70's the Celestion 66 speaker is still highly regarded as one of the best floor speakers made. Please note these are made to order to insure the veneer comes from the same batch as the Abyss sideboard to create the perfect match.

OSF Table

client — b2 architects type — Dining Table
year — 2022

Designed and built for b2 architects. The practice required a dining table for a client that could seat up to 14 people. Working from the client brief, Barnaby designed an extending table made from American walnut and rippled sycamore. The space saving table extends out along the width to create a square which keeps conversation open between all diners, an advantage over the classic length extension.

The OSF Table is designed in a mid-century modern style. A solid black American walnut underframe creates strength to hold the large 2400 x 2400 mm rippled sycamore top. The edge is curved to client specification and lipped with American walnut. The extension slides are built by the German company Pottker. The runner system is designed to extend both leaves when opened from one side. The spare leaf is stored within the table and guided into place with handmade American walnut pins.

Available for reproduction.
